In an especially troubling turn, that same survey found -- even though congressional approval ratings are at an all time low -- voters trust Republicans in Congress as much or more than the President on big issues like health care and the economy. Less sympathetic, though, was another seasoned Democrat, this one a veteran of the Bill Clinton White House. Also, the media itself is becoming polarized, and that can be seen as delegitimizing Gordon's ongoing analysis of future events. Nevertheless, an undeniably crucial factor is that Web 2. His margin was further padded by the lethargy of conservative voters, who were lukewarm to Sen. After Super Tuesday, John McCain had become the clear frontrunner, but by the time the polls were closed, he found that in Colorado and Virginia residents had the seventh- and eighth- highest economic confidence in the nation.
